

SOMETHING NEW IN JOHN KNOX PRESBYTERY

Presbytery Council has approved the formation of a Generosity Task Force. Their work will focus on two related areas: generosity as a spiritual discipline and the practice of year-round stewardship. For the former, Christian spiritual disciplines that are practiced regularly become habits. For the latter, despite what it may sound like, year-round stewardship is NOT about frequently asking for money. It's telling your donors the ministry their dollars are enabling your church to do. It's expressing gratitude for those financial contributions. And it's inviting current and potential donors to support the good work your church is able to do...or could do in the future.

Happily, our churches are not beginning from scratch in either of these areas. Each congregation in John Knox Presbytery is already doing great things. The Generosity Task Force would like to serve as a clearinghouse for the wonderful ways churches are joining what God is doing in their communities. You are invited to share stories of your congregation's generosity with the task force. Tell us and we'll tell everyone!
